

Q9. Do you have any suggestions or comments about an online event, and what would make you likely to attend?

- As 3.11 falls on a workday, it would be helpful if the event were held later in the evening so I can watch it live. I realize this would prevent the event from happening at the time of the tsunami, which could be upsetting for many people who lost family and friends.
- Fukushima in the world e.g. Fukushima garden in London
- Guest who can answer audience questions about the accident and recovery, how Japan is ensuring it doesn't happen again.
- If it held globally, time is the concern.
- Attend as have relatives still living in Fukushima, interest as a member of the Honolulu Fukushima Kenjinkai.
- Life of the locals after the incident as well as if it is possible for us to revisit some damaged sites for educational purpose
- Talking to people who are still living in temporary houses.
- I would like to know about future measures for treated water containing radiation.
- I would like to see beautiful landscape and people's life. I would like to know how people are attached to their homeland.
- Good co-ordination of the visual platform, with opportunities to contribute to discussion on topics, presented by people from the area, and including young people. It would be good to build on previous exchanges of school students with an event (s) where they can shape their own futures.
- An art show? pictures from the mountains?
- I would like to visit Goshikinuma area again when I have opportunity to visit Japan, therefore you may introduce us tourist hotpots and accommodations.
- What are the plans for the future and when is the effected area expected to fully recover?
- It's been 10years since the accident. The information of people who are still fighting for the life and how the nuclear pollution is tried to be under control, those information upload on youtube or facebook.
- It would be good to have a mix of interactive as well as non-interactive elements
- because of the current situation with the pandemic and everyone will probably still be restricted to interacting with others online, so some interactive element with audience would be nice

- I think a lot of people will have or already have some sort of zoom fatigue after months of being restricted at home, so it would be nice to spread the heavy topic about the accident or incident with lighter content in between
- As I live in a different country, I hope there is a recording of the events that we could visit at any other times.
- How we can help as foreign consumers?
- That it was honest. Hearing from people who live there, doctors and local government. Not companies.
- Engagement activities, a raffle is a good idea
- I would definitely attend. I visited Fukushima as part of the education exchange with Nishimoto-san and Hanoaka-san and it was life-changing. I would like to see what the young people we met are doing. I will never forget visiting the High School, nor the primary school.
